

Tyler Aston Week 14 Reflection

SCORE 100/100

This class has been a blessing and I am so grateful for Brother Clements for his uplifting spirit! My score is based on my in-depth response to 5 20-point questions.

20 pts Questions Cognitive: (Wow, I learn?... Ok that is deep!)

Why is this week's topic important for teamwork?

This is a great topic to end on! What makes a team different from a group of people is that each person in that group is working with the other people. This is defined no better than in the saying "the whole is greater than the sum of its parts." Its about how the parts interact together. If the wheels on a car aren't communicating well with the speedometer, even though the car still works, there's going to be some problems.

How do plan on contributing to the team, besides completing your tasks?

Making sure that open lines of communication between me and my teammates is there and used all the time. As a leader it is your role to make sure those points of contact between the working parts of the team are being used and are well greased.

How does your experience relate to other experiences you have had?

This semester I have had to work in a team in almost all of my classes. By far my team for this class was the most enjoyable. This is because the synergy we had between each other was great. We all sat next to each other all semester and we joked and shared personal experiences before class. Then when it came time to put in work, we had no problem setting up lines of communication and using them. Also, we had more confidence in getting work done. I think being comfortable in a team is best for synergy.

Tell me about what you taught someone? And what did they learn, that they didn't know before?

I had an opportunity to share a video with my parents that they haven't seen before and it relates to synergy and teaming. Its titled "Inside Church Headquarters | The Power of Councils." This is how the top organization of our church is run. I didn't know there were multiple councils that each govern over different areas of the church organization. My favorite part of this video is how when President Nelson became president of the church his big thing was unifying all the councils together. This is such a great example of synergy. I shared these thoughts with my parents.

If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel?

I will direct this answer to my previous response. I will to add that aside from councils each Member of the Godhead is in perfect harmony and unison with each other. This is literally a perfect example of teamwork.
