

Tyler Aston Week 10 Reflection

SCORE 100/100

I gave myself this score based on my in-depth responses to 5 20-point questions.

20 pts Questions Cognitive: (Wow, I learn?... Ok that is deep!)

Why is this week's topic important for teamwork?

Nothing can get done without effective communication. We need to be able to understand each other in order to work more efficiently in achieving our goals. If we can't properly communicate our ability to get things done is significantly reduced and even could end.

How do plan on contributing to the team, besides completing your tasks?

I will be able to use the principles taught this week in order to make sure my team is structured in a way that will enable clear channels of communication. This will help my teammates better contribute to our goal as it is harder and discouraging if no one is communicating.

How does your experience relate to other experiences you have had?

I have been on many failing teams because a lack of effort resulting in no communication till it is too late. This is always done early on in the group formation. At the beginning of the group forming it is important to build a foundation of clear channels of communication and clearly defined goals and actions.

Tell me about what you taught someone? And what did they learn, that they didn't know before?

In my personal relationships they have always had hardships as a result of bad communication or lack thereof. My fiancé and I are constantly working on improving our communication. Right now, we are planning a wedding and it is important that we are on the same page both physically and spiritually. This is done by many of the concepts taught this week in class. Majorly its important that we don't make any assumptions regarding each other's knowledge of the matter.

If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel?

When we follow the promptings of the Holy Ghost it is clearer what we are being told if we have a clear path of communication. Things like hatred, lust, jealousy, etc. all cloud of communication with the Lord. If we work on resolving those things, we can build trust and faith between us and the Lord.
