

Tyler Aston Week 13 Reflection

SCORE 100/100

I gave myself this score based on my in-depth responses to 5 20-point questions.

20 pts Questions Cognitive: (Wow, I learn?... Ok that is deep!)

Why is this week's topic important for teamwork?

This week we are asked to read an article and watch a video on personality. Personality is something that I think is like a unique finger print. Each of us have something about us that makes us unique based on how we behave and act. These characteristics will show in our work as well and makes us human. We see that in each other and make us likable leading to better teams.

How do plan on contributing to the team, besides completing your tasks?

By showing my personality and getting to know others helps make us more human and relatable. Some personalities aren't very compatible and its important to identify what we have in common and go from there.

How does your experience relate to other experiences you have had?

There used to be a lot of personalities that I didn't want to be around. I have recently changed my life choices and I think it has allowed me to be more accepting of those personalities I had problems with. We should all be more accepting and find good in others.

Tell me about what you taught someone? And what did they learn, that they didn't know before?

Just talking to my roommate, he mentioned he didn't like being around a type of people because of their personalities and I simply taught him that we should view them as the Savior Jesus Christ sees them. This is a characteristic we should all adapt to our personalities.

If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel?

A lot of people fear being more involved in the gospel because they don't want to seem dull. This concern is not true because it's not the gospel that has created that stereotype which they fear but the lack of personal real-life experiences. If we are already having such a great personality the gospel only amplifies it to becoming even better.
