

Tyler Aston Week 12 Reflection

SCORE 100/100

I gave myself this score based on my in-depth responses to 5 20-point questions.

20 pts Questions Cognitive: (Wow, I learn?... Ok that is deep!)

Why is this week's topic important for teamwork?

Loyalty is something that is important to a team. If you feel like your teammates aren't loyal to the project it will cause feelings of distrust and maybe not want to delegate work to them for they may be gone. It is important to make your intentions clear and be honest in your dealings. If you want to change projects or companies let it be known and create an appropriate exit plan.

How do plan on contributing to the team, besides completing your tasks?

I plan to exercise my openness of my intentions on staying with the team. I want to make it clear my conditions for loyalty and the consequent outcomes. This isn't all about if 'x' changes then I quit but more of positive things like when I'm available and how I'm loyal to those times. If I say something I'll do it.

How does your experience relate to other experiences you have had?

When in a job interview and accepting a job, I don't commit to something like saying I'll stay for a year if I don't mean it. I also add conditions to it as well. These are important because if the employer won't meet those conditions, then it is obviously not a job I want because they won't be loyal to them. It's a two-way road.

Tell me about what you taught someone? And what did they learn, that they didn't know before?

The most recent devotional the sister speaker spoke on being all in with the Lord. This is such loyalty that we are able to show the Lord and God and those around us that they can count on us to be there when we are needed. This is something I taught to my roommate and later to my fiancé. Of course, they knew this but it's something that is often overlooked as we weaken our devotion and renewing that devotion can come from a lesson like this.

If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel?

I refer to my previous response and add a few things. In the gospel we make a few really important covenants with God and we do so when we can prove that we are going to be loyal enough to endure till the end. This is the only thing in my life where I feel my loyalty indefinitely lies (marriage falls in the scope of God will.)
